

FINANCIAL ACCESS CHECKLIST

Do you or your spouse handle most of your financial activities? If your spouse were not here today, would you know the passwords to your Online accounts, how to pay your bills, be able to find the deed to your house, or access the contact information for your accountant? Below is a checklist of information that should be shared with your spouse to assure you each have access to manage important financial tasks independently.

In summary, it is important to make your partner aware of all financial aspects you manage to avoid any potential issues with gaining access to an account, locating important documents, or retrieving specific information. If you have any questions, contact us or learn more about our services.
